What's your dream job?

My dream job is in-house counsel for an arts organization, preferably an art museum. However, there are a total of four of those positions in Chicago ...

Describe your job hunt in SIX words or less:

"Move to NYC or L.A." (I don't want to.)

Hiring managers should give you a call because:

I am willing to work for SO much less than other lawyers in order to get to do what I love!

What's the most important thing RedEye readers don't know about you?

If you believe that most lawyers are sharks, then consider me a dolphin. Unless you need a shark. Then consider me a dolphin with teeth.

What's your favorite place to look for jobs?

Museum websites, law firm websites, lawyer resource websites, bar association websites, Craigslist—you name it, I've probably been there.

What's your top tip for living cheaply in Chicago?

There are all sorts of free things to do in this city—most of them depend on good weather, unfortunately. Lincoln Park Zoo is a personal favorite, but all the big museums have free days, and there are so many small museums that are free all the time (check out the Museum of Contemporary Photography at Michigan Avenue and Harrison).

Oil spill: Next move

BP officials consider trying to stop gusher with smaller container

Associated Press

ON THE GULF OF MEXICO A day after icy slush clogged the massive box they hoped would contain an out-of-control oil gusher in the Gulf of Mexico, BP officials Sunday said they may try again—this time with a smaller container.

They also were considering several other options to stop the daily rush of at least 200,000 gallons of crude oil, which began washing up on beaches in thick blobs over the weekend.

With crippled equipment littering the ocean floor, oil company engineers scrambled to devise a fresh method to cap the ruptured well.

Their previous best hope for containing the leak quickly, a four-story containment box, became encrusted with deep-sea crystals Saturday and had to be cast aside.

Among the plans under consideration:

- Deploying a new, smaller containment box in the hope that it would be less likely to get clogged. Officials said the new box could be in place by midweek.

“We’re going to pursue the first option that’s available to us and we think it’ll be the top hat,” the smaller box, BP Chief Operating Officer Doug Suttles said.

- Cutting the riser pipe, which extends from the mile-deep well, undersea and using larger piping to bring the gushing oil to a drill ship on the surface, a tactic considered difficult and less desirable because it will increase the flow of oil.

- Shooting mud and concrete directly into the well’s blowout preventer, a device that was supposed to shut off the flow of oil after a deadly April 20 oil rig explosion but failed. The technique, known as a “top kill,” is supposed to plug up the well and would take two to three weeks.

“We’re going to pursue the first option that’s available to us and we think it’ll be the top hat.”

BP CHIEF OPERATING OFFICER DOUG SUTTLES (ABOVE), DISCUSSING THE CONTAINMENT BOX

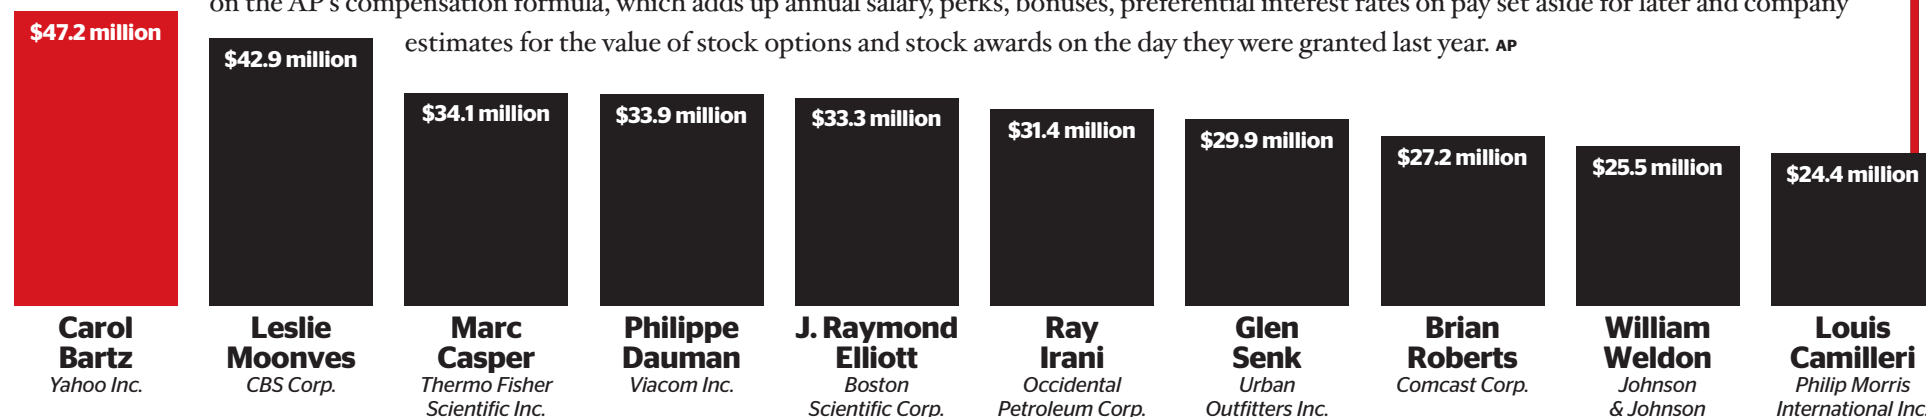

- Try again to use the containment box that failed to work Saturday after finding a way to keep the crystals from building up.

An estimated 3.5 million gallons of oil have spilled since the explosion April 20. At the current pace, the spill would surpass the 11 million gallons spilled in the 1989 Exxon Valdez disaster in Prince William Sound, Alaska, by next month.

BP is drilling a relief well that is considered a permanent fix, but that will take several weeks to complete.

Facebook, I hate your money-grubbing ways

I'm officially done with Facebook.

Which is not to say I'm deactivating my account. Cleverly, Facebook has made itself as important a social and professional tool as e-mail or a cell phone. As a writer trying to carve a place for myself in the sclerotic, method-out present-day media environs, I could no more deactivate my Facebook account than I could start composing on a typewriter.

Having said that, boy, am I pissed. Facebook's latest gambit to make private information available to third-party advertisers is a new low, but we all should have seen it coming. After all, it's a free service that's supposedly worth some untold billions of dollars. Eventually it was going to have to demonstrate how it would make money.

Now Facebook has monetized everything you like, everyone you know and everything you do. What began as a platform for college kids to quixotically express themselves, organize around shared interests and surreptitiously stalk every girl who had a ton of Cancun spring break bikini pictures available for full public viewing (not me—I mean other, weirder, creepier guys) basically has become another marketing grist mill.

Corporations, politicians and D-list celebrities love social media because it's all free advertising. Thus I can become Facebook friends with Ford, PepsiCo, Mitt Romney and the stars of "The Hills" more easily than actual people, because actual people do not want to be friends with a bunch of sycophantic strangers. Up until last week, I'd ignore friend requests from anyone I didn't know. I wanted to maintain my Facebook page as a private collection of the close friends and interesting people I'd accumulated over the past half decade.

That was—obviously—completely naive and idiotic. I now look back at myself a week ago and wonder if I also thought that sprinkling fairy dust on my head would make me the prettiest princess in the land. I'm now accepting friend requests from anyone, up to and including Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad.

Whimsical, Week-ago Markley, meet Ruthless, Permanent Marketing Campaign Markley. While you express your literary tastes under Favorite Books, he is going to hit you very hard in the nose and pants you.

I also believe there is a social media bubble that, when it bursts, won't leave wreckage like the housing bubble but will make us all feel just as stupid.

Twitter, MySpace, LinkedIn—they attracted the attention of young people by flattering our sense that everyone is a special flower with lots of brilliant things to say about Vampire Weekend. But as these sites attempt to turn themselves into whorish revenue machines, normal people will lose interest and depart. Then it'll just be people like me, who make a living through self-promotion.

So, Facebook, I'll see you in hell.

I'll be right there on the corner hanging out with my new friends Kristin Cavallari, Mitt Romney and PepsiCo.

FACT OR FICTION?

Bulldogs must give birth by Caesarian section.

FACT: Well, technically, some can give birth naturally, but English bulldog experts say it's dangerous for both mom and pups. Laura Wesseln of Chicago English Bulldog Rescue says the breed's large heads and hip problems make it risky for them to undergo natural births. She says that's part of the reason for the dogs' $3,000 and higher cost from a reputable breeder, but even puppy mills usually deliver their bulldogs via C-section.

You have to, ahem, aid a bulldog after he does his business.

FACT: It's not a law or anything, but Molly Marino, founder and executive director of Chicago English Bulldog Rescue, says it's a good idea to clean the dog's bottom if his corkscrew tail is still intact. "Sometimes the tail gets interesting oogies," she said, recommending a baby wipe to complete the job. Otherwise, skin infections could set in, she said, a common ailment for the breed. Some owners amputate the tail to avoid problems.

Wrinkly field

Fat-faced bulldog emerging as Chicago's newest must-have pup

By Georgia Garvey | REDEYE

Like a "clingy girlfriend," Helen Rabadan's bulldog, Lulu, follows her around the house, certain that any trip outside will be one they'll take together.

To go somewhere alone, "you kind of gotta sneak out," says Rabadan, 27, of Portage Park. She adores her 3-year-old baby and takes her virtually everywhere, but admits that at times, "she can be [like] an unwanted spouse."

Despite being guilty of the occasional annoyances Rabadan described, the wrinkle-faced bulldog is scampering up popularity ranks in the city—moving from fifth to third on the American Kennel Club's list of top Chicago dogs for 2009. It's the only breed in the top five to leap so much.

Maybe it's the bulldog's laid-back exercise demands or its clownish personality that make it a must-have for so many Chicagoans. Some just like the pooch's unique look.

"They're kind of ugly-cute," says Dan Holder, 23, a special-education teacher who lives in Logan Square. "They're cool dogs."

He and his wife, Jennifer, 22, did research for months before choosing Lucky, a 2-year-old male bulldog, as a friend for their other dog, Bigfoot, a basset hound mix.

They picked the English bulldog after taking an online quiz that said the breed would be their perfect personality match. The quiz asked questions such as whether the dog owners were devoted exercisers—not ideal for the bulldog's shuffling, awkward walk—and what they're like at parties. It was all in an effort to pair potential owners with the type of dog—outgoing, shy or energetic—that's most like they are.

Holder said he doesn't remember all his answers but knows he and his wife were looking for a loving and lazy dog, a description the bulldog fits to a T.

Lisa Peterson, AKC spokesperson, said bullies—as they're affectionately called—are on the national radar for a lot of reasons, including the breed's easy-to-groom short coat. The breed also has plenty of celebrity fans and owners, most notably comedian Adam Sandler.

There are other breeds of bulldog, but the AKC recognizes only two, French and English. The standard-bearer for most people is the English, the breed most think of when they picture the bulldog. They're mascots for dozens of schools, including the University of Georgia and Yale University.

But as popular as the bulldog may be of late, it can't lay claim to the top spot, held both in the city and nationally by the Labrador retriever. The Labrador—easy to train, good with kids and smart—has had a hammerlock on the No. 1 seed for decades. Nipping at its heels, though, is the German shepherd, which Peterson says may have gained visibility for its protective and working traits. They're often used in law enforcement and are good family dogs as well.

"You see them at airports," she says. "They're out there; they're helping to keep the homeland safe."

For some breeds, their time at the top of the pack can be fleeting.

Dogs such as the vizsla, which last year cracked

Did you know?

An ordinance that would fine owners anywhere from $50 to $250 for loud and repeated dog barking or crying passed the City Council last year unanimously. The barking has to be heard by a police officer or sworn to by three witnesses from different addresses. The ordinance, passed Oct. 7, also covers loud noises made by other animals.

the AKC's top 10 in Chicago, have dropped off. The shih tzu, which once was tied for 10th place with the vizsla, Peterson said, sunk to the 14th-most popular spot while the vizsla fell only one place, to 11th.

Peterson points out popularity spikes for certain breeds come and go, as people see the dogs on TV shows or in the arms of celebs they admire. Rin Tin Tin, she said, helped keep the German shepherd in the top spot for years in the mid- to late 1920s. On the strength of "Lassie," the collie rose to become the third most popular breed in the nation in the late 1940s, according to the AKC.

Although the English bulldog is the must-have dog now, experts say the breed has its drawbacks. The canines are susceptible to skin and ear infections. They often snore and also are prone to heatstroke and hip problems. Bulldog owners attest that medical bills for their pets can be high.

ANDREW A. NELLES

"They're genetically challenged," says Molly Marino, executive director and found of Chicago English Bulldog Rescue. She estimates a typical dog owner will spend about $300 a year on expenses; the bulldog owner, by comparison, will lay out $1,000 to $1,500 a year, depending on whether they live in the city or suburbs. "A lot of people don't realize how delicate [bulldogs] are."

And then there are the aforementioned personality quirks. They're needy dogs, owners report, ones that will joyously hog attention. Some owners refer to the "bulldog shadow" that trails after them wherever they go. Though these bullies may look mean, like a roughed-up boxer, they're actually emotional marshmallows.

That's certainly been the experience of Emily Tillack, 24, who lives in the West Loop with Heidi, her 1½-year-old bulldog.

"At first it was very comparable to bringing home a new baby," she says. Even walking into a room for two seconds will prompt a quick patter of feet after her. "Everywhere we are, she wants to be." GGARVEY@TRIBUNE.COM

CHICAGO DOG PROFILES

According to the American Kennel Club, the most popular dog breeds in Chicago for 2009 were the Labrador retriever, the German shepherd, the bulldog, the Yorkshire terrier and the golden retriever, in that order. We imagine what the pups' Chicago profiles might be like.

1 Labrador retriever

Lives in: Andersonville

According to some stats, Sweden has the highest number of Labradors per capita in the world, so Andersonville's Scandinavian roots make it a natural choice for the most popular dog in Chicago (and the country).

2 German shepherd

Lives in: South Loop

This working dog enjoys a long history, so the revitalized South Loop works well for the once-again popular German shepherd.

3 Bulldog

Lives in: Wicker Park

This squat canine is smoking hot, both in its popularity and in its inability to regulate its own temperature. Wicker Park's cool enough for any hipster, even one as expensive as the bulldog.

4 Yorkshire terrier

Lives in: Gold Coast

The Yorkshire terrier has starred in movies, lived in the White House during the Nixon administration and is featured on the laps of wealthy society ladies the world over. In Chicago, our jet set curl up for the night on the Gold Coast, so this terrier will be a perfect fit.

5 Golden retriever

Lives in: Wrigleyville

This gorgeous and popular dog needs to be where the sun is shining and the crowds can admire her fabulous good looks. In Wrigleyville, the sorority girls can jealously eye her flowing coat, the exact color they request at the salon.

Mothers together

Parents of children slain by gun violence gather at Chicago church

Chicago Tribune

Maria Ramirez got out of bed Sunday and tried not to think about Mother's Day.

The Chicago woman, whose only child, Matthew Ramirez, 16, was shot four years ago, instead gathered at St. Sabina Catholic Church with the only people who could understand the anguish of losing a child to gun violence: mothers who had suffered their own loss.

Clutching framed pictures and pins of their children, the women asked other mothers to intervene if they see their child get in trouble with gangs. They urged adults to act before another son or daughter is killed.

"You don't know what it's like to wake up and not have your child on Mother's Day or any other day," said Ramirez, whose son was

TOP COP: VIOLENCE DOWN

Even as violent murders and beatings make headlines across Chicago, police Supt. Jody Weis said violent crime is down 11 percent in the city. He said the murder rate so far this year is below the five-year average for the same time period. "While the public perception is that violence has increased to unprecedented levels, the facts do not support that conclusion," Weis said Sunday. TRIBUNE shot while walking home from a friend's house because the gunman mistakenly thought he was in a gang, authorities said. "I don't even get to hear anyone say 'mama' anymore."

They made the plea during the dedication of a statue in the South Side church that depicts the kind of street violence that killed their children. The wooden sculpture by artist Jerzy Kenar portrays a shooter and his young victim. Each mother laid a note card with their slain child's name at the base of the statue, which will remain in the church's vestibule.

The Rev. Michael Pfleger said the image serves both as a reminder and a wake-up call.

"We want to tell people who look at it to do something," he said. "We've got to do more than cry. We've got to change the madness that is killing our children."

The memorial came a day after a citywide effort to curb gun violence where police collected more than 4,000 guns and weapons in exchange for gift cards and demonstrators marched through a section of Ashburn where there have been a spate of recent shootings.

Survey: Chicago gas is priciest in nation

A gallon of regular unleaded gas will cost you more in Chicago than anywhere else in the country, according to a national survey released Sunday. The national Lundberg Survey of fuel prices said that among cities surveyed, Chicago had the highest average price for a gallon of regular unleaded: $3.72. Denver had the lowest average price at $2.71 a gallon.

Breast cancer walk draws 30,000

Breast cancer survivors, their family members and friends donned pink and held signs of pictures of survivors and those who lost battles to breast cancer as part of Sunday's Walk to Empower breast cancer awareness walk through downtown. Free health screenings were given at the end of the walk, which drew about 30,000 people.

Woodlawn fire displaces 9 residents

Two people were injured and a total of nine people were displaced after a fire broke out Sunday inside a frame house in Woodlawn, officials said. About 3:15 a.m., firefighters and paramedics were called to a building in the 500 block of East 68th Street, Chicago Fire Department spokesman Question Curtis said.

UK parties struggle to reach power deal

8 LONDON The two parties that could form Britain's next government held hours of closed-door talks Sunday without reaching a power-sharing deal, and there are fears that the political uncertainty could stoke market jitters when trading reopens Monday.

Conservatives and Liberal Democrats have a "mountain to climb" on issues including electoral reform, a senior member of the Liberal Democrats said. The Liberal Democrats want Britain to shed a system that gave them just 9 percent of the seats in Parliament after they won 23 percent of the popular vote, but if Conservatives give in it could leave them at the smaller party's mercy in future elections.

The divide could offer an opening for Prime Minister Gordon Brown's Labour Party to stay in power through a coalition with the Liberal Democrats and some smaller parties. Liberal Democrat leader Nick Clegg wasn't involved in talks with Conservatives on Sunday, but he met with Brown that afternoon and had what a party spokesman said was an "amicable discussion."

A deal must be brokered soon to calm financial market anxieties about Britain's economic stability.

"We're very conscious of the need to provide the country with a new stable and legitimate government as soon as possible," Conservative foreign affairs spokesman William Hague told reporters before disappearing into London's Cabinet Office for negotiations with senior Liberal Democrats.

After six hours of negotiations, Hague emerged to announce that the two parties agreed that they should focus on economic stability and reducing the ballooning budget deficit. More talks were planned Monday, he said.

White House: No cyber attack on Wall Street

9 WASHINGTON The White House's homeland security and counterterrorism adviser says there is no evidence that a cyber attack was behind the chaos that shook Wall Street last Thursday.

John Brennan told "Fox News Sunday" that officials have uncovered no links suggesting that cyber attacks caused the turbulence.

Meanwhile, European leaders, pressured by sliding markets, agreed Sunday to provide a huge rescue package of nearly one trillion dollars in a sweeping effort to regain lost credibility with investors. Officials are hoping the size of the program will signal a "shock and awe" commitment.

WESTERN CONFERENCE SEMIFINALS • GAME 5

San Jose center Joe Thornton scored Saturday to help eliminate Detroit. AP

Hawks don't mourn for Red Wings

Chicago Tribune

Before he retired for the evening, Jonathan Toews caught the first couple of periods of the Red Wings desperately trying to avoid elimination Saturday at the hands of the Sharks.

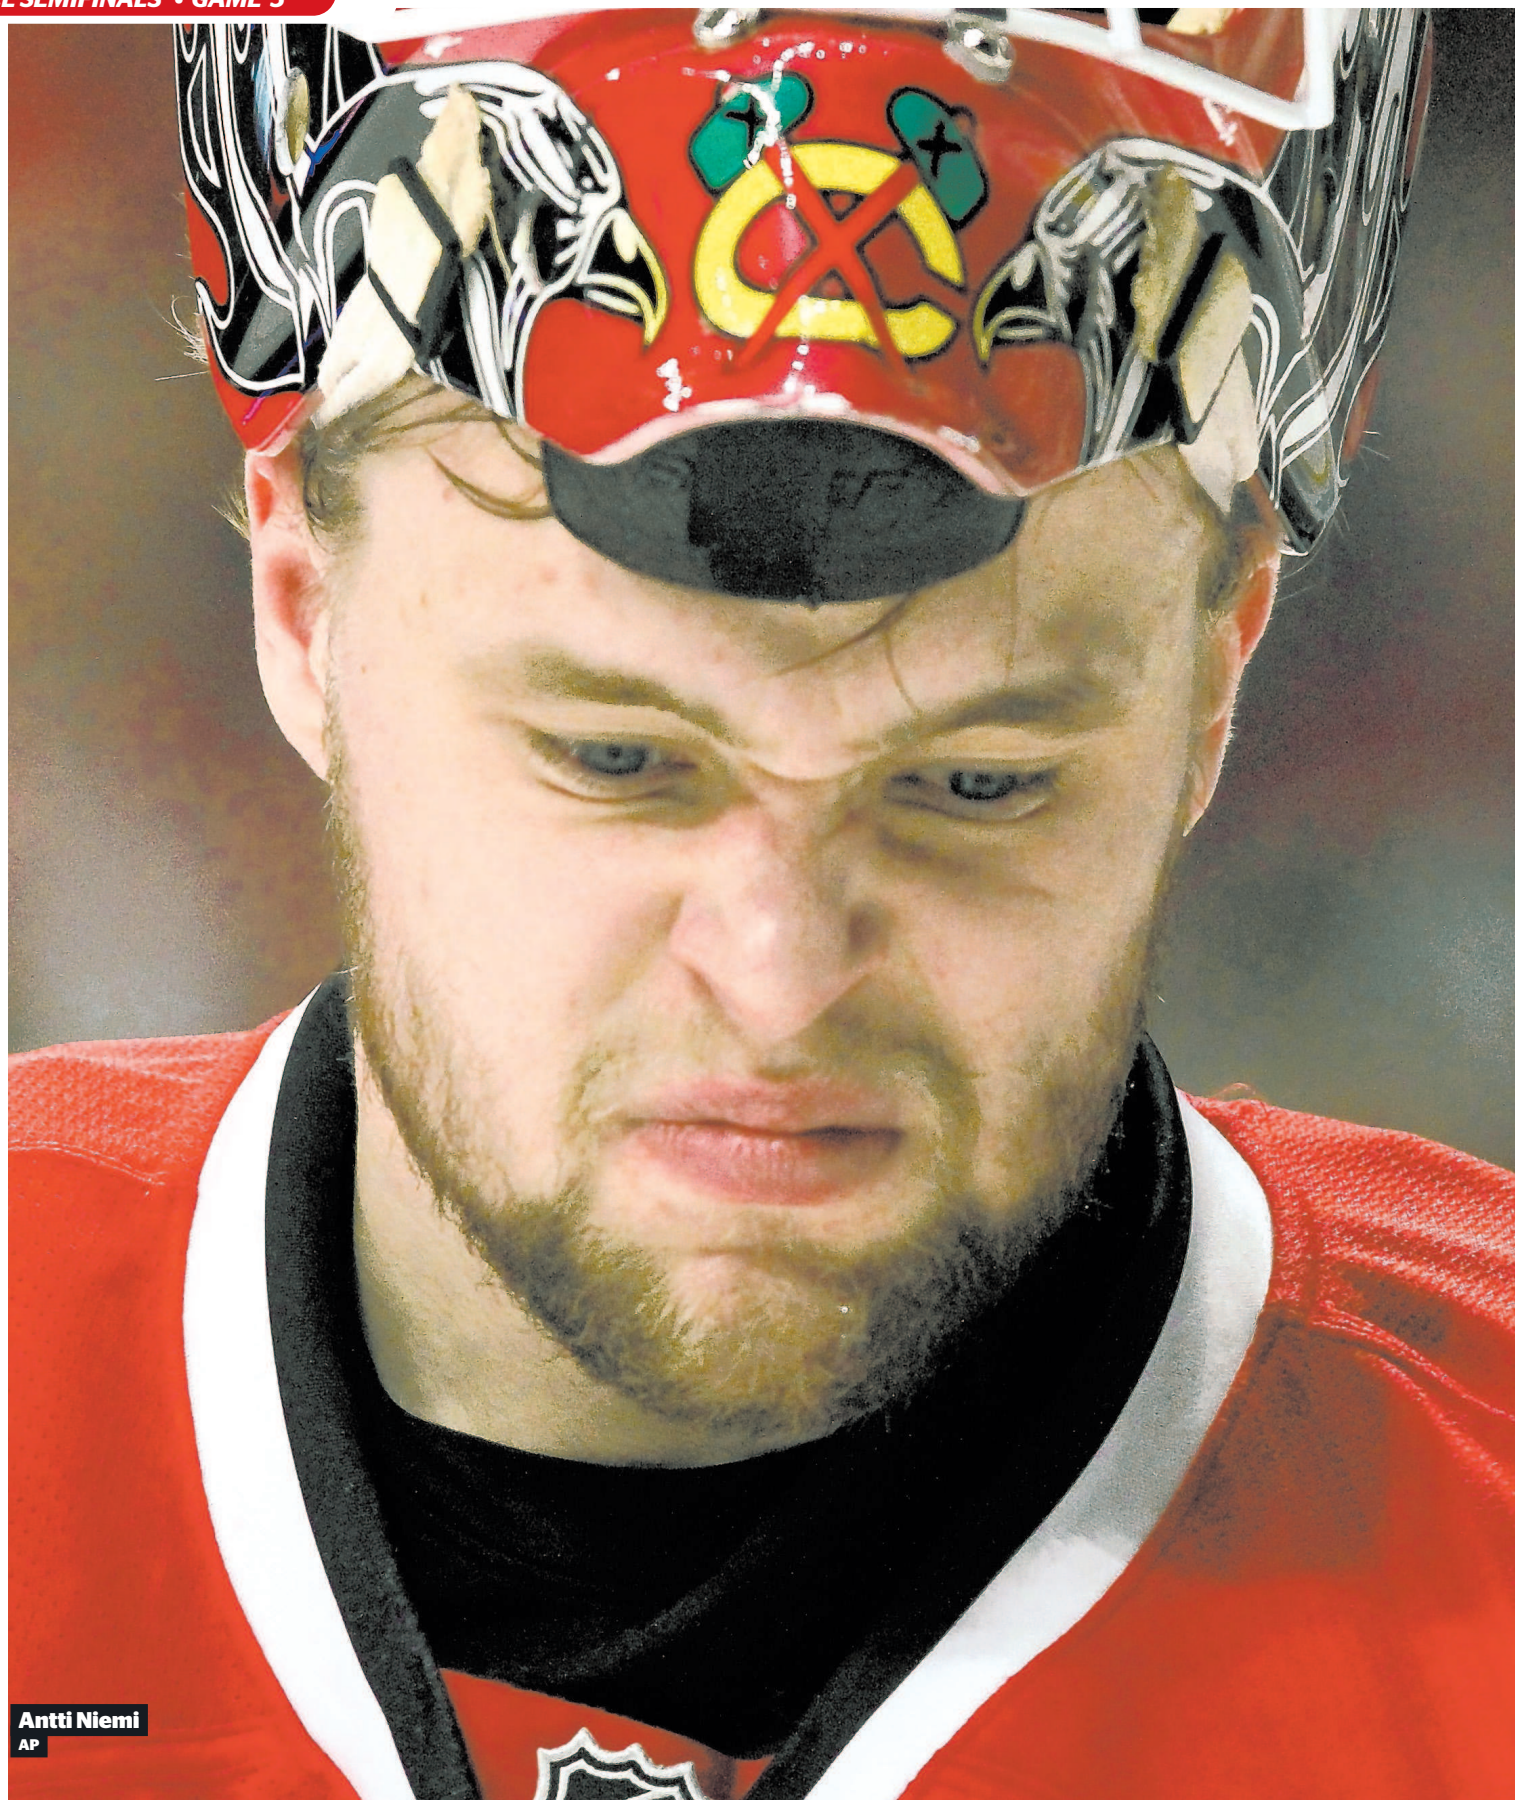

When the Blackhawks captain awoke Sunday to find that Detroit had been dispatched, the postseason suddenly free of his team's greatest antagonists, Toews more or less felt what everyone else did: Mild eyebrow-raising, but not total shock.

"It's tough to imagine, it happened so quick," Toews said before the Hawks faced the Canucks in Game 5 on Sunday.

"I think a lot of people may have underestimated what type of team Phoenix was, but obviously seeing a [first-round] series like that [which extended Detroit to seven games], you might think they were a little more vulnerable this year. Still, they're a heck of a team. It's surprising to see them go out in five games."

There is, according to Hawks defenseman Brian Campbell, a pretty decent explanation. The Red Wings had less than 48 hours before the conference semifinal against the rested Sharks began, and it was closer than it looked anyway. Every Red Wings loss was by one goal.

"It's tough—they've had two long years going to the finals and then they go seven games in the first round," Campbell said. "Even when you put up a good effort, it's tough to come back two nights later for those teams and win those games. They're a great team, and a bounce here and there ... it could be changed."

CANUCKS 4. BLACKHAWKS 1. BLACKHAWKS LEAD SERIES 3-2.

STAR WARS

WITH SERIES ON THE LINE, VANCOUVER FENDS OFF HAWKS

RedEye

There's an old adage in sports that says when the playoffs arrive, a team's stars are supposed to shine. In the Western Conference semifinal series between the Blackhawks and Canucks, only one team's stars have shown up.

The Blackhawks have had crucial contributions from Captain Serious Jonathan Toews, boy wonder Patrick Kane, Patrick Sharp and hired assassin Marian Hossa, among others. The Canucks' regular season leading scorers and their captain, Roberto Luongo, have, shall we say, underachieved.

Enter Sunday night's possible series-ending game at the United Center. It's a do-or-die game and a perfect time for stars to step it up. Did they? Let's go to the RedEye Star Tracker.

GAME 6

Blackhawks at Vancouver

8:30 p.m. Tuesday, CSN

CHICAGO BLACKHAWKS

MARIAN HOSSA

Didn't have much of an effect on the game, unless you count penalty minutes as a positive contribution. He was whistled for hooking in the first and high-sticking in the third.

Verdict: Falling star

PATRICK KANE

The only stat he recorded? One shot on goal. That's not why he landed on the cover of video game "NHL '10."

Verdict: Red dwarf

PATRICK SHARP

He was at risk of being the invisible man on the ice, but he made up for it with five shots on goal. Unfortunately, none of those shots found the net. Sharp shooter? Not on this night.

Verdict: Shooting star

JONATHAN TOEWS

Scored the team's first goal in the third. He now leads the NHL in playoff points with 19. Captain Serious is living up to his name.

Verdict: Shining star

VANCOUVER CANUCKS

HENRIK SEDIN

One half of the dreaded—not dreaded—Sedin duo, Henrik had two assists and always seemed to be near the action in his 17 minutes on the ice.

Verdict: Shooting star

DANIEL SEDIN

Had an assist on the first goal less than a minute into the game, giving the Canucks some much-needed momentum and quieting the United Center crowd at the same time.

ROBERTO LUONGO

The whipping boy so far this series, Luongo came through big time. He had 29 saves on 30 shots. He controlled the puck in the crease and cut down on the rebounds that had haunted him.

Verdict: Blue giant

ALEXANDRE BURROWS

Capped the game with an empty-net goal to put the game officially out of reach.

Verdict: Shining star

1 What is it about the Blackhawks that brings out the worst in Vancouver?

Probably their breath.

Vancouver feels nothing in common with the Hawks' friends—and would it kill the Hawks to put the seat down?

Chicago is Vancouver's drunk uncle. All we do is show up and embarrass them.

It's not the Hawks but our deep-dish pizza. It gives them gas.

Hawks pack a mean Toewser gun.

2 Why do the Hawks get so many hat tricks against the Canucks?

Well, when Luongo's giving up goals in bunches, it's just bound to happen.

I'd say they've perfected the art of slipping one past the goalie, but there are legal ramifications.

What can I say? They're not afraid to Canuck if you buck.

They won't admit it, but the Canucks do love "Chelsea Dagger."

Tough to stop the puck with tears in your eyes. Cry, Luongo, cry!

3 Roberto Luongo apparently has shaved his playoff beard. Thoughts?

Good Lord, that's a bit drastic.

Congratulations. Jimmy won't shave his until his chin's sporting The Bieber.

He saw the sign and it opened up his eyes. Now hopefully the Hawks get into the light where they belong.

He must have given up when he saw Jimmy's beard in the RedEye playoff beardoff.

Had to be with a Lady Bic.

4 Starlin Castro finally is with the Cubs. What do you expect from him?

I expect nothing and, if the Cubs' luck stays true to form, will get less.

One bad pun involving his name from the broadcast booth per game. Time to set goals that can be reached.

An unrealistic amount, only to crap on him when he doesn't live up to it. It's the Chicago way.

To burn bright then flame out, just like all the "star" Cubs rookies who preceded him.

Great play at shortstop until Lou sends him to the bullpen.

5 What's your theory about how Tiger Woods injured his neck?

The Theory of Elin Retribution.

Different kind of playoff beard, different kind of hat trick.

Eh, it's an old injury from last November acting up again.

Same way Woody Allen hurt his jaw in "Annie Hall." Netflix it.

According to Larry David, there are two ways to hurt your neck: car accident and [bleep]. Tiger's 2-for-2!

CINCINNATI 5, CUBS 3

Marlon Byrd slides safely into home Sunday under the tag of Reds pitcher Mike Leake after a wild pitch. AP

Road tripped

CINCINNATI The timing couldn't have been worse for Lou Piniella and his Cubs.

Piniella went out to the mound to talk to Ryan Dempster with a one-run lead and two men on in the seventh inning of Sunday's game against Cincinnati, trying to find out if Dempster was out of gas. Sean Marshall was warming up in the Cubs' bullpen, and left-handed-hitting slugger Joey Votto was at the plate.

But seconds after Piniella returned to the dugout, Votto cranked a first-pitch slider 433 feet for a three-run homer, launching the Reds to a 5-3 comeback win.

"He said he was fine," Piniella said. "Two runs, five hits over seven innings ... our bullpen is beat up. The guy hit it out of the ballpark. What are you going to do?"

The Cubs finished the road trip at 1-5, falling to 14-18. Piniella's decision was easy to second-guess because of the results.

"I can't blame either one of them," catcher Koyie

TORONTO 9, WHITE SOX 7

Fred Lewis hit a three-run homer off Bobby Jenks and the Toronto Blue Jays rallied to beat the White Sox 9-7 on Sunday. Jenks (1-1) failed to retire any of the four batters he faced. Travis Snider doubled and John Buck singled before Lewis drove a 3-1 pitch into the right-field seats to give the Blue Jays an 8-7 lead.

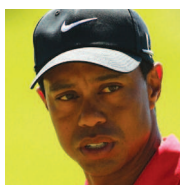

Jenks was booed as he walked to the dugout after yielding a single to Aaron Hill.

Hill said of Piniella and Dempster. "Demp was wanting to stay in the game. I wanted him to stay in the game. He pitched a great ballgame. ... He earned the right to stay out there and face [Votto]."

Dempster knew Piniella would take some heat for the move, like any manager in a similar situation.

"He doesn't deserve any heat for that," he said. "I was honest with him. I told him I felt good. I just put the pitch in the wrong spot."

Tiger Woods (right) withdrew from The Players Championship on Sunday with an injury that he fears might be a bulging disk in his upper back. "I've been playing with a bad neck for about a month," Woods said.

WOLVES 2, TEXAS 0 Series tied 3-3

The Wolves avoided elimination in the AHL playoffs Sunday with a 2-0 shutout of the Texas Stars. Joey Crabb and Anthony Stewart scored for the Wolves. Game 7 will be at 7 p.m. Tuesday at Allstate Arena.

Touring Ride: The Road to Hegewisch

Distance: 40 miles

Ride to the far South Side community of Hegewisch with Chicago Cycling Club member and local history buff George Vrechek. (Warning: A Hegewisch-related pop quiz is probably in store.) Bring money for eats at Darcy's Dog and Shrimp Shack. Because it's a touring ride, you're expected to maintain 14-18 mph. Can't keep the pace? You may be gently asked to try one of the club's social rides instead. Hint, hint.

Start: 31st Street Beach House, 3100 S. Lake Shore Drive

When: 9 a.m.-2 p.m. May 22

Cost: Free; chicagocyclingclub.org

Dumpling Derby

Distance: 17 miles

Foodie-run cycling group Fork and the Road offers leisurely paced rides through the city in search of under-the-radar restaurants. This derby includes sweet and savory tastes of Indo-Pak, Polish and Colombian fare at three veggie-friendly spots. With a focus on eats rather than endurance, this is a good season starter.

Start: Kitchen Sink, 1107 W. Berwyn Ave.

When: 11 a.m.-4 p.m. May 30, Sept. 12

Cost: $50; forkandtheroad.com

Bike the Drive

Distance: 15-30 miles

The mother of group rides, this annual tour hosted by the Active Transportation Alliance attracts 20,000 cyclists eager to raise a collective middle finger to cars, without fear of retaliation, along Lake Shore Drive from 57th Street to Bryn Mawr Avenue. Ride fast, ride slow: It's up to you. Non-negotiable hills guarantee a sweat regardless of skill. Stick around for live music in Butler Field and a pancake breakfast ($7 extra), in case you want those freshly shed calories back.

Start: Columbus Drive and Jackson Boulevard

When: 5:30-9:45 a.m. May 30

Cost: $32-$42; bikethedrive.org

L.A.T.E. Ride

Distance: 25 miles

Expect a rolling party vibe during this annual late-night tour of downtown streets and neighborhoods. (There's a new route in the works for 2010.) Stop for snacks at the midway point and expect a second wind when the sun rises over the lake. The pace starts slow due to volume and increases slightly along the route. Even so, this is a leisurely, fun ride.

Start: Buckingham Fountain, 500 S. Columbus Drive

When: 11 p.m. July 10

Cost: $45; lateride.org

Boulevard Lakefront Tour

Distance: 15, 35 or 62 miles

This popular ATA benefit ride is the laid-back, beer-swilling cousin of Bike the Drive. Rides range in length, but because they cut through city streets and are therefore subject to traffic signals, you can expect a leisurely pace for any option. (We hear it's mostly flat, too, unlike Bike the Drive.) The post-race fest includes food and beer vendors and live music.

Start: Morgan and Taylor streets

When: 7 a.m. Aug. 29

Cost: $25-$30; boulevardtour.org

Gemini May 21-June 21

As Mercury goes direct, you'll find it easier to hook up with people. That hot date you planned a month ago—the one that never materialized—will happen at last. That long game of phone tag you were playing with someone will be over.

Cancer June 22-July 22

Don't let clumsy words get in the way. If your honey makes an ill-informed comment or your girlfriend insults you, get over it. Everybody has a bad moment. Uranus says focus on the good things the two of you share.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

Recent developments are making your love life complicated. You let a friend sleep on your couch and now you can't get rid of him. Or maybe your boyfriend's bandmates asked to rehearse in your living room and you let them. Mars encourages you to wait it out.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

It's been a weird few weeks, but Mercury now is helping you instead of hurting you. Instead of discovering you have broccoli in your teeth during that hot date, you'll find your date is falling in love with you. Instead of obsessing over an idiotic ex, you'll focus on a wonderful new friend.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

Venus is putting you in a happy frame of mind. You and your sweetheart are in a cozy mood. You'll snuggle constantly, giggle all the time and find greater levels of compatibility in the bedroom. Things are looking good.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

You could be wondering what you ever saw in that certain someone. A moon opposition is turning you into Mr. or Miss Negative. You need to let it all go and move on with your life. Spend time with friends who make you laugh.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Funky Venus is inspiring you to get a little wild. You won't want business-as-usual sex with your partner. You're ready to spice up things. Invest in whipped cream, silk sheets and a decent sex manual or two.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

A friendly moon is helping you lighten up. You're not worried about your love life being perfect; you just want it to be fun. As long as you are enjoying spending time with someone, you're content. Don't goof it up, OK?

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

You're in a talkative mood thanks to Mercury. You'll send sext messages to your lover in the middle of a business meeting just to be naughty. Or you'll engage in sensual pillow talk by phone with an out-of-town lover.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

You're a very psychic sign, and you need to trust your intuition. If you meet somebody gorgeous who gives you the creeps for some reason, listen to your gut instincts. Something weird could be going on with that person. The moon says pay attention.

Aries March 21-April 19

Mars is heightening your sex drive. You'll jump on anything that moves. If you're single, you'll be tempted to look up that psychotic-yet-sexy ex for a hop in the sack. If you're with someone, you'll want to stay in bed all day.

GOT A TIP?

Do you have a hot tip on a celebrity sighting in Chicago? E-mail Luis or tweet him @luisarroyave.

I learned a lot about the White Sox players' taste in music this past week. Some might say too much. Before Justin Bieber threw out the first pitch at U.S. Cellular Field on May 3, Sox catcher A.J. Pierzynski told me one of his teammates wasn't exactly a stranger to the 16-year-old singer's music.

"I don't know much about him," Pierzynski said in the locker room. "The only guy on the team who I know is a fan is Gordon Beckham."

Pierzynski was kidding. I think.

When Beckham heard about the team's special guest, the Sox second baseman yelled, "Bieber is going to be here? Yes!" And when he was told Bieber is behind the song "Eenie Meenie," Beckham, still in his loud, exaggerated voice, asked, "He sings that too?!"

Minutes later, Beckham combed his hair down with his fingers to try make it look like Bieber's trademark mop. As anyone who has seen Beckham's hair can tell you, he didn't have to try too hard.

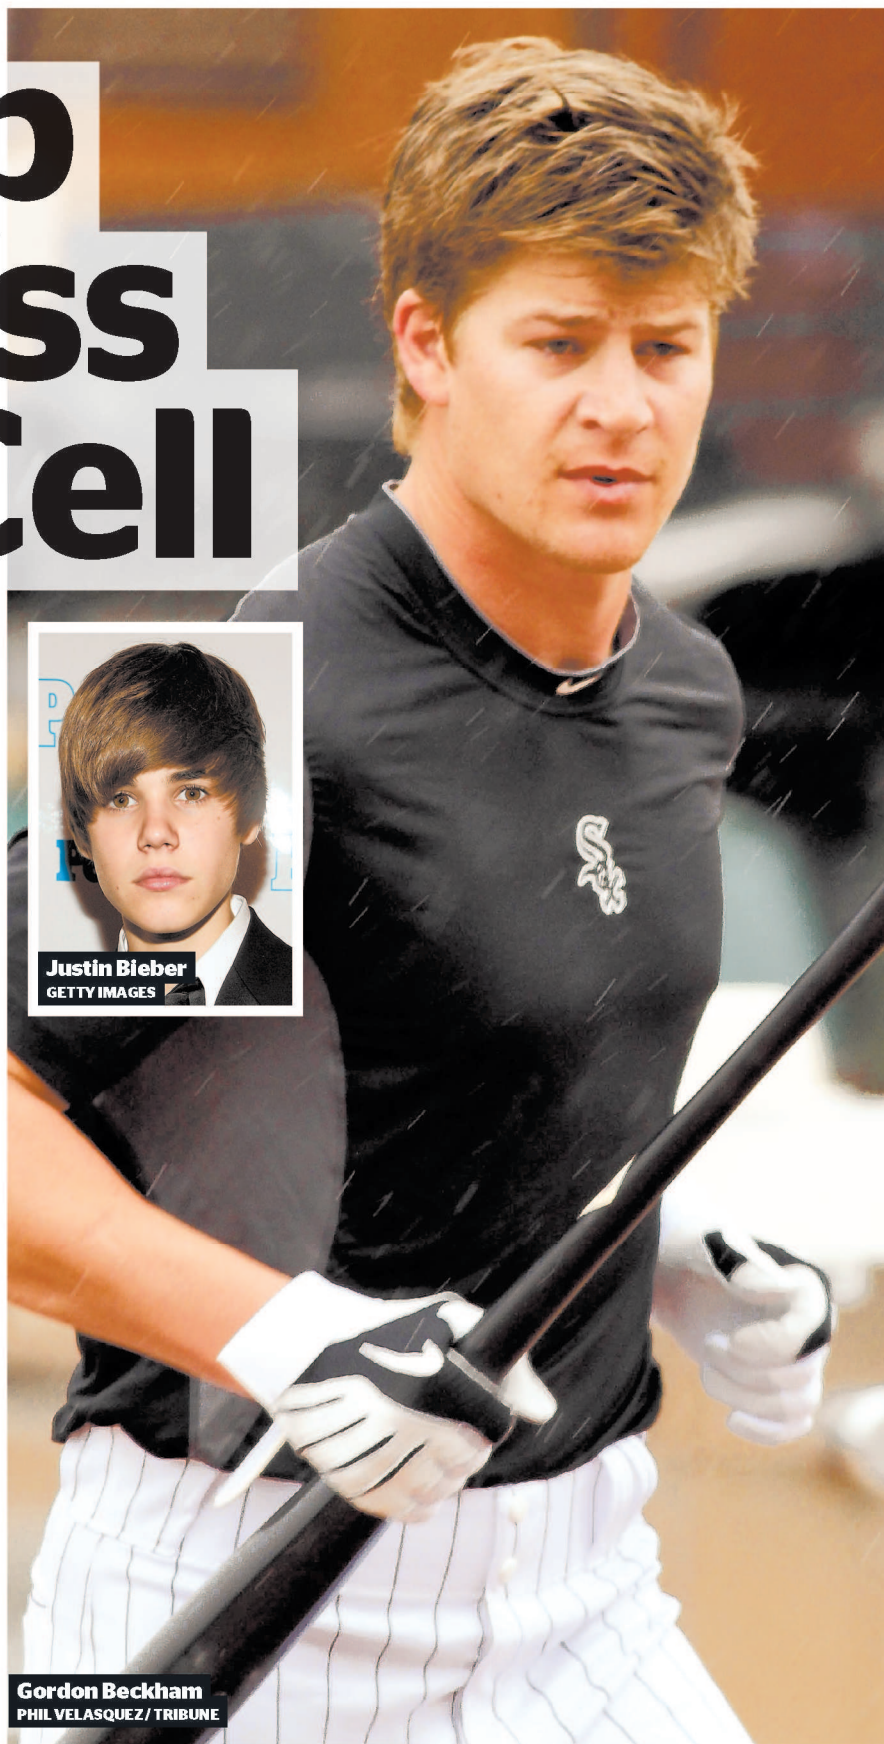

Bieber, in town to tape "The Oprah Winfrey Show," arrived shortly before game time. He took a photo with White Sox first baseman Paul Konerko, one with outfielder Carlos Quentin and one with—you guessed it—Beckham.

Sox manager Ozzie Guillen didn't take a photo with Bieber—as far as I know—but he did take his wife to the Gilberto Santa Rosa/Oscar D'Leon show at the House of Blues on Thursday. Also at the salsa concert was Sox shortstop Omar Vizquel, pitcher Freddy Garcia and catcher Ramon Castro.

Vizquel was invited on stage by D'Leon, a fellow Venezuelan, during the show and ended up playing the drums and timbales with the band for a few songs.

Neil Patrick Harris likes his boys beefy: Afterelton.com asked the "How I Met Your Mother" star to pick his hottest 10 guys in Hollywood, and NPH responded with gusto. Harris' top 10 was (from the bottom to the top): Nick Jonas (10), Ryan Kwanten (9), Channing Tatum (8), James Franco (7), Taye Diggs (6), Ryan Reynolds (5), Colin Farrell (4), David Williams (3) and Ryan Phillippe (2). And clocking in at No. 1 is his boyfriend, David Burtka. Awww.

Betty White on 'SNL'

Golden indeed

"Saturday Night Live" scored its highest overnight ratings in 18 months, thanks to an 88-year-old firecracker named Betty White. The show averaged an 8.8 rating/21 share among 56 local markets—a high for the series since Nov. 1, 2008, when Ben Affleck hosted and Sen. John McCain made an appearance. Final ratings, including viewer totals, are due from Nielsen on Thursday, ew.com says.

Meet my kid, Werewolf

Be prepared to be ridiculed, kids. According to the Social Security Administration, Bella and Jacob top the 2009 list of the most popular baby names. Kristen Stewart's Bella is short for Isabella, the new No. 1 girl's name, and Jacob, played by Taylor Lautner, has reigned atop the boy's list for 11 straight years. What about Robert Pattinson's character Edward Cullen? Cullen is the fastest-rising name among boys.

Baby talk

Michael Jackson is remembered as a lot of things, but a prankster? Russell Crowe tells GQ magazine he befriended the pop star and Jackson often would crank-call him. "A gruff voice would say something was wrong, then this tiny little voice said, 'Don't worry, this is Michael,'" Crowe said.

Tyson needs a bailout

Mike Tyson admitted on "The View" on Friday that "I'm totally destitute and broke. I had a lot of fun. It just happened." But things are looking up for the former world heavyweight boxing champ, who says he's found love with his third wife, Lakiha "Kiki" Spicer, and is committed to his six children. He's also working on a reality show project with Animal Planet.

Get really 'Lost'

ABC might as well call May 23 "Lost" Fans' Wet Dream Day." The channel extended the "Lost" series final by a half-hour last week, and this week Jimmy Kimmel announced he would host nearly the entire cast on a special edition of his show after the finale. Variety also reports Kimmel will show three alternate final scenes.
